Urban Design Planning is an essential service provided to our clients with expertise at Land Design South. Community design examines the context of the relationships of all elements which shape the land where people live, work, learn and play. These elements may include social, regional, historical and the built environment. In order to develop a design that meets the needs of the entire community, Land Design South carefully analyzes all potential resources to ensure the preservation of natural systems and integration of public and private living environments.

As cities continue to be reborn and revitalized, Land Design South remains at the forefront of this progress. Urban areas possess a great amount of culture, identity and energy. The scale of work varies greatly. From the large scale, planned mixed use developments in the tradition of new urbanism to waterfront redevelopment of festival marketplaces, and green markets to city block style infill development and small residential districts, Land Design South has experience in each type of design development.
