The development of a business park in a community can spur economic development and ultimately lead to a catalyst for business growth in a community. For that reason, our clients, both government and private, have approached us for master planning and site planning.

We have completed regional headquarters for such noted clients as the Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission Headquarters, a state agency of Florida spanning five counties, the business parks of the City of Belle Glade, and the Jewish Community Center Headquarters. We worked closely with each one of these clients to determine a clearly identifiable site plan design which will allow for great access, strong visibility and long term growth potential.

Business parks are developed by municipalities as opportunities for growth. In determining options for development of a site, we are keenly aware of access points to the interstate and collector roads, visibility from major corridors and expansion opportunities for build out.
